Kuschel writes a love letter to wool. It says that weaving can become a means of communicating and connecting with the surrounding environment, a practical and poetic, ancient and sustainable means, thanks to which the human spirit finds one of its purest and most genuine expressions. The texture comprises of intertwined and hand-knotted threads and fringes in warm or cold shades reflected in the wool and silk yarns for a tactile and visual experience rich in nuances and craftsmanship. With this precious wool rug available in two versions, Salem van der Swaagh signs her first collaboration with Tacchini.

Salem van der Swaagh

Salem van der Swaagh is a material and color expert, currently based in New York, New York. After graduating from the Rhode Island School of Design in 2005 with a degree in textile design, Salem went on to obtain a second degree in sustainable product design from the Design Academy Eindhoven in The Netherlands. From there she has worked for the last decade as an expert textile designer and color specialist for a wide variety of European clients and design studios, including the JongeriusLab, Vitra, and Kvadrat. Her focus has been on woven developments as well as coloring for an expansive range of interior materials. Previously based in Berlin, Germany, she has worked in the field of ecological textile design and coloring for both product and interior, including establishing her own brand of sustainably woven interior products in 2015. Her textile designs focus on bringing a rich textural experience into the interior environment. They are a celebration of wool in all of its varied forms.
